“3rd Place National Award”

My annual trip to Wyoming is always artistically inspiring, and again this year I was honored at the Susan K Black Artists Conference’s art show for my pastel artwork receiving ‘Third Place Other Media: Pastel’ for my painting “Don’t Have a Cow,” which also sold at the opening reception.

For six years I have been invited to participate in the annual conference and art show in Dubois, Wyoming. Over 120 mid-career artists from all over the USA, Canada and Pakistan were juried to participate this year.

Each artist was invited to submit two paintings measuring 100 square inches or smaller into the competition. The quality of the artwork was impressive as usual. The four judged categories included oil, acrylic, watercolor, and mixed/other media including sculpture, colored pencil, fiber arts and pastel.

This year my husband, Dave, accompanied me on the trip and we spent time observing and photographing wildlife in Yellowstone’s Lamar and Hayden Valleys, absorbing the spectacular views of the Grand Teton National Park and attending the Jackson Hole Fall Arts Festival.

During our seven day visit, I completed five pastel paintings, renewed old friendships and created new ones, and took over 1300 photos! I try to soak up all of the inspiration the West has to offer, which, along with my photo references, will last me through the winter months and the coming year. I look forward to this week of week of intense, self-directed painting time that has had a great impact on the bold direction of my work. Ewe Who Posters Available

My pastel painting “Ewe Who” was selected for the poster and postcard invitation for this year’s Brunswick 10x10 Benefit Art Show on October 1, 2010. The image has been so popular that posters around Brunswick have been disappearing! The committee has decided to issue a limited number of posters on fine paper, to be signed by me at the opening reception, Friday, October 1, 5 pm. FMI: Contact Lucy Cooney lucycooney@comcast.net
